The Ball Players

"In His Arms," the comedy drama which had its first presentation last night at Arts and Crafts Theater and which will be repeated tonight, is a novel and amusing presentation of a group of wanters—perfectly human in their various points of view of life.

There is, for instance, Elise Clarendon, played by Mary Shallue. She knows perfectly well what she wants, but does not think she ought to take it. Lily Cartwright and Frances Bedell, as revealed by Virginia Stanton and Marie Johnson want pretty much everything in sight, and take all they can get as it comes along. Joe Cartwright, in the hands of Robert Stanton shows convincingly that he has had too much of what he shouldn't have.

Mr. Clarendon, the new rich man, played with gusto by Oliver Gale, is the only one who thinks he has what he wants—and the comedy lies in the evident fact that he does not know he is not within a mile of having what he thinks he has.

As Mrs. Clarendon, Louise Walcott adds another joyful characterization to her local list—the long suffering wife who is not sure of precisely what she wants, but knows positively she does not want what she has.

Ernest Fairleigh, a gentleman dumbbell, who does not know what he wants until it is too late to get it, is convincingly limned by Winsor Josselyn. Of them all, it is only Tom Van Ruysen—George M. Ball—who knows what he wants, and reaches out and grabs her—pronto.

As in all of the plays produced by George Ball and Richard and Rhoda Johnson, the set is most attractive, distinctly different in design and appointments—and with its long shelves of books—real honest-to-goodness, well-thumbed books,—and its comfortable furniture, it has the satisfying appearance of a room that has been lived in longer than fifteen minutes after the interior decorators have left.

The cast of the play, in the order of their appearance, is as follows:

Fannie, Kathryn Johnson; Frances Bedell, Marie Johnson; Joe Cartwright, Robert Stanton; Lily Cartwright, Virginia Stanton; Mrs. Clarendon, Louise Walcott; Elise Clarendon, Mary Shallue; Ernest Fairleigh, Winsor Josselyn; Mr. Clarendon, Oliver Gale; Mrs. Fairleigh, Louise Wilson; Tom Van Ruysen, George Ball.

The City Business

Last Monday night was the time set by the city board of trustees for hearing protests on the proposal to concrete Dolores street and Seventh avenue. There were three protests—Mrs. Isabel Leidig, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Larouette and Mrs. Constance Lowell. All objections were overruled and the work will proceed, following advertising for bids and award of contract.

A letter from the Coast Highway Association, including a resolution endorsing the speedy completion of the Carmel-San Simeon highway was read and discussed. By a vote of 5 to 4 the board went on record in favor of the project. Trustee J. B. Dennis voted "no."

The diagram of assessments for the work on Ocean avenue and Carpenter street, prepared by City Engineer H. D. Severance, was adopted by the board. The amounts have not yet been figured.

Mrs. Florence Spoehr appeared before the board on behalf of the trustees of Sunset School, to urge the closing of Ninth avenue from San Carlos to Mission. The school property is on both sides of this one block, almost directly in the middle of it. Should the block remain open as it is, it would be a constant menace to the pupils on their way to and from the playgrounds. The trustees unanimously agreed to take all the legal proceedings necessary to close the street permanently.

Property owners residing north-east of Ocean avenue urged the vital necessity of a sewer in that district. A sufficient number have not petitioned for the improvement, so that the board was not in a position to order the work done. The matter was reported to Health Officer H. D. Main for investigation.

A. K. Miller tendered his resignation as Deputy Marshal and Tax Collector. It was accepted with a vote of thanks for painstaking service.

At the suggestion of the Superintendent of Streets, the trustees will erect a temporary shed on Block 69 to house the recently purchased street repairing equipment.

The three-months'-old controversy as to sidewalk conditions at Ocean avenue and Carpenter street bobbed up again last night. It is probable that the matter will be ironed out this week.

PINE INN ADDITIONS NOW COMPLETE

The splendid addition to Pine Inn is practically completed. Twenty new commodious and well-furnished rooms with bath are now available to the public. Nearly every room has a splendid view of Carmel Bay and the broad Pacific.

With the new addition, the bungalows and the old building, Pine Inn is now able to comfortably and efficiently accommodate about two hundred persons.

The new dining room is a joy. It will seat 250 persons. There is plenty of light, it is airy, and the view from the west windows is delightful.

It is particularly gratifying to have the enlarged Pine Inn ready for the multitude of visitors who will be here this summer.

They'll Come Again

Masonry on the Monterey Peninsula was tremendously stimulated by last week's two days' reuniin here of the San Jose Scottish Rite bodies. It will probably result in the establishment of a Carmel lodge in the not-very-distant future.

To Grant Wills, general chairman of the committees in charge, and to John B. Jordan of Pine Inn, much credit is due for the success of the entire affair. To Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Kuster, who made possible the use of the Golden Bough, thanks is also due.

Candidates in excess of the number anticipated enrolled with Secretary R. W. Thompson for the purpose of taking the fourth to eighteenth degrees. Of the forty-one who enrolled, eight were residents of Carmel. They were: John B. Jordan, R. F. Ohm, Percy Parkes, E. L. Taylor, F. W. Sheldon, H. L. Warren, Charles Watson and W. S. Johnston.

One hundred and four Masons attended the banquet at Pine Inn on Saturday night, presided over by C. J. Clark. It was the first use of the new dining room. In an address, brief and to the point, Mayor William T. Kibbler extended the greetings of the residents of Carmel, and expressed the hope that having come once to Carmel, the visitors would come again. That they will come again, possibly once a year, seems certain, judging by the applause which greeted the Mayor's remarks.

On Sunday noon another gathering of the entire body was held in the dining room, and this time the souvenir programs, jointly prepared by M. DeNeale Morgan and the Pine Cone Press, were presented to all present.

All but one of the distinguished visitors went home by auto and train Sunday evening, but just to show how this organization does things, Secretary Thompson stayed over until Monday morning and wiped the slate clean of every bill contracted by the organization.

Let us hope they will make a more extended stay next time.

CITY ELECTION

If there is to be any preliminary excitement attending the election for three city trustees it will have to come soon, for the day for casting ballots is only a little more than two weeks away.

The last hour for filing nomination papers expired last Tuesday at noon, without the filing of any additional candidates. Thus we have eight seekers for three available positions.

It is interesting to hear the various combinations which citizens are announcing they will vote. Here are some of them:

Kibbler—Hoagland—Hamlin.
Jordan—Foster—Kibbler.
Foster—Edler—Kibbler.
Edler—Kibbler—Miller.
Wood—Hoagland—Kibbler.
Kibbler—Jordan—Foster.
Miller—Wood—Hamlin.

It is probable that during the coming fortnight several of the candidates will announce the platforms upon which they ask the support of the voters.

Marshal Gus England was appointed Deputy Health Officer, his chief being Dr. H. D. Main, County Health Officer, last Monday evening.

The Sullivan Talk

It will be many a long day before Carmel again has the pleasure of listening to so well-equipped a speaker as was heard at the Golden Bough last Sunday evening.

Mark Sullivan was introduced to a small but select audence by Robert Welles Ritchie as "the last survivor of the old-tme reporters."

Sullivan is a most interesting personage, not only on the platform, but at the dining table, as a group of local writers learned just before the lecture. They were present at the invitation of John B. Jordan to meet Mr. Sullivan.

Mr. Sullivan is an ideal platform man. He has a fine presence, personal magnetism, a splendid memory, imagination and wit.

His address, presented in an informal, conversational manner, was devoted principally to a resume of outstanding political and industrial occurrences during the past quarter century.

Quoting Will Hays—"Things do not just happen; they are brought about," Mr. Sullivan's estimate of the outstanding and most influential personal figures between the years 1900 and 1925 gives food for much thought. These men are Bryan, Roosevelt and Wilson. Bryan established himself by his magnetic personality and sincerity, Roosevelt by his tremendous energy and versatility, Wilson by his idealism and poetic nature.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the quarter-century was the elevation of women politically. And in this connection Mr. Sullivan said: "In the old days the literature in the barber shop consisted of the 'Police Gazette' and the 'Sporting Times'; now it is the 'Ladies Home Journal' and 'Vogue.' 'Bob' is a new word as used today, for in my boyhood 'bob' had to do with a sled."

Mr. Sullivan told how two mining engineers in South Africa—McArthur and Forest—while the gold and silver fight was on, discovering a new method of extracting gold, thus ruining Bryan's bid for the Presidency. When in San Francisco during the national Democratic convention, Sullivan asked Col. Bryan if he had ever heard of McArthur and Forest. "Yes," said Bryan, "I know what you are going to say; It was not McArthur and Forest's gold that beat me—it was Mark Hanna's."

In answer to questions from the audience, Sullivan related many interesting bits of personal opinion of prominent people. Senator Lodge, E. M. House, Senator Hiram W. Johnson, young Bob LaFollette, Senator William Borah and others.

HARRIET MONROE SPEAKS TO CARMEL WRITERS

A small but interested audience at Arts and Crafts Wednesday night gathered for an intimate hour with Miss Hariret Monroe, editor of "Poetry," realizing that this slight and quiet woman represented probably the greatest fostering and liberating force for American poetry in our generation.

Miss Monroe talked informally of certain factors in the new poetry, told of some of the personalities who had come to her editorial rooms in Chicago, and closed with reading from her own books strikingly diverse types of poems, which were received with much applause.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

The Monterey County Builders Association held their regular monthly get-together at Pine Inn. There was a splendid attendance. M. J. Murphy was the host of the occasion. The banquet was held in the new dining room.

In order to give Peninsula fans their first view of "Clothes Make The Pirate," from Holman Day's story of that name, Manager Otto Junkins of the Manzanita Theatre has cancelled the showing of "Stop Flirting" for next Wednesday night.

During the next week those having in charge the raising of funds for the local Boy Scouts will make a determined effort to raise the balance of the funds necessary to put the troop in first-class shape. Subscriptions may be paid at the Pine Cone office.

On Wednesday evening the last of the concrete was poured on Carpenter street at its intersection with the county road. After drying out and hardening for twenty-one days the road will be open to pleasure cars only. No heavy traffic will be permitted on this new highway.

The beautiful McKee residence and grounds on San Antonio avenue was sold during the week. The new owner is William Vander Roest, who will shortly take possession. The McKees have made arrangements with Contractor M. J. Murphy to begin immediately the erection of their new residence at Tenth and San Antonio.

While attending the Masonic banquet last Saturday night, Pastor Fred Sheldon was called out on an emergency case. His services were required to unite in the sacred bonds of matrimony "Bobby" Norton of this city and Miss Ruth Windahl of Berkeley. Bob is now in the real estate business. Mrs. Norton is in the Berkeley school department.

Mark Sullivan was the guest of honor last Sunday evening at Pine Inn when, at the invitation of John B. Jordan, a group of writers and former newspaper men sat down to a delightful dinner. Those present were: Robert Welles Ritchie, Fred R. Bechdolt, James Hopper, W. L. Overstreet, John B. Jordan, Herbert Heron, Dr. A. E. Burton, Winsor and Talbert Josselyn, and W. S. Kingsbury. Afterward, the entire party attended the Sullivan lecture at the Golden Bough.

"DULCY" AGAIN

Of the Golden Bough production of "Dulcy" early this month, we said "staged sumptuously, ideally cast, coached to near perfection—and that's 'Dulcy.'"

The repetition of this delicious play next Friday and Saturday, for the benefit of the Easter holiday visitors at that time on the Peninsula, as well as those of our own population who missed the initial performances, will doubtless result in sold-out houses. It is particularly gratifying that every person connected with this refreshing production, director, cast, electrician, and "grips," is a bona fide Carmelite. The play stands as a fine example of the Golden Bough's principle, "Amateur status, professional execution."

According to report, about half the population of the San Francisco Bay region will be in an around Carmel next week-end. Carmelites are reminded that if they desire seats for their friends in blocks of two or more, reservations should be made at once.

ON THE WAY TO MONTEREY

Owing to the work of paving upper Carpenter street, and the bumps in other by-roads, the best temporary route between Carmel and Monterey at present is through Hatton Fields.

From the end of the Ocean avenue pavement across Hatton Fields to the paved county road is only a quarter of a mile, and although this stretch has not yet been surfaced, it is smooth from rolling.

Work in grading and culverting the Hatton Fields roads has progressed rapidly under the direction of W. A. Dontanville, and all in Tracts One and Two will be finished early next month. Meanwhile the roads are passable through the forest and to other points on the property.

The installation of four- and six-inch water mains in Hatton Fields is scheduled to begin next week.

Members of the O. E. S. were entertained at the home of Mrs. Chas. Watson last Thursday, and made plans to form a Social Club in Carmel. Officers were nominated and elected, and committees appointed. Refreshments were served, and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent. Those present Mesdames: Wm. Titmas, Grant Wills, H. E. Farley, W. C. Farley, D. L. Staniford, C. W. Wentworth, F. L. Rector, C. A. Watson.

To the Members of the Carmel Protective League

Having become a candidate for City Trustee, it is fitting that I should sever my official connection with your organization. For this reason I have placed my resignation in the hands of your Executive Committee.

But the time seems opportune to say something as to the future of the League. In its short history to date but few opportunities have arisen in which it could take an active part or exert any great influence. Nevertheless, I believe that it has gained a place in the life of the community and from that beginning we may reasonably hope for greater results in the future. Our pledge of membership is surely broad enough to successfully survive any honest criticism and with it for a platform we should continue to urge all good citizens who have a real interest in the growth of Carmel, to join us in shaping that growth. Under wise leadership the League can be a powerful force for civic good. It can bring together in reasonable compromise, opposing opinions; it can see that misunderstood public problems are properly presented to the people; it can bring to the front and put in nomination for public offices, men and women best fitted for such offices; it can use its influence towards protecting public officials from thoughtless and unjust criticism, so that those we would have in such offices may be more willing to serve; it should seek, in cooperation with the city's officials, to protect the unique natural attractions of this growing section, while at the same time it provides for safety, comfort and conveniences that are required by a community with so high a standard of living. These are but a few of the channels open to our efforts. But there are some things it should not do. It should not permit itself to be made the tool of selfish interests, and above all, it should not fall under the influence of that peculiar trait of human nature which loves a fight for the fight's sake—providing it is the other man's.

Now a word for myself. Inasmuch as you have manifested sufficient confidence in me to make me the first President of your organization, I feel emboldened to ask your further support at the polls on election day. If elected I will, of course, be guided by the terms of my pledge as a member of the Carmel Protective League in all matters in which I am called upon to act. In addition to this I also declare for a greater degree of publicity in the matter of expenditure of the city's funds. I believe that an advance estimate of the expenses for each fiscal year should be prepared and published before the Tax Rate for that year is voted and that the Tax Rate voted should be sufficient to meet this estimate only. In other words, I want to see a true "Budget" system. In the past our taxes have been assessed at the full legal limit and if any estimate of financial needs for any future period has ever been made, it has never been published.

It is with the hope of accomplishing something for our community along the lines indicated above that I am asking your support.

Very truly yours,
Adv. GEORGE L. WOOD

Carmel Protective League

Declaration of Principles and Purposes

Carmel is a village of great natural beauty, built up by home owners of moderate means. The great majority of its taxpayers came here, not to promote or even to endure commercial or metropolitan enterprises, but to escape them and their attendant evils of exhorbitant expense and destruction of privacy and quiet. This being true, such public improvements as may be required to meet the needs of this city of home-makers should be governed by these considerations. And for these purposes we are organized:

1. The preservation of Carmel's natural beauty, unspoiled; and the retention of its unique character and value as a City of Homes.

2. The diminishing and limiting of taxation; and the application of the resources of this city to Carmel's legitimate needs, and for the best interests of all its taxpayers.

3. Economy; and even-handed justice in the initiation and administration of all public improvements.

4. We shall oppose what appears to be the growing menace of machine rule or arbitrary, irresponsible boss rule; and of any possible subserviency to special or speculative interests, whether inside or outside the city limits of Carmel.

5. Finally, the Carmel Protective League is organized to work for the selection of, and to cooperate with, officials who pledge themselves to act, and who do act, in harmony with this program of equal justice, modern taxes, integrity, efficiency and home rule, and to insure that there be no discrimination nor exploitation of one class or section for the benefit of any other.

To secure these results, we pledge ourselves, individually and jointly, to use every means to which we are entitled, whether political or legal.—Adv.

3 AND 2—"YOU'RE OUT!"

Fred Bechdolt's flock of Hoot Owls tightened their hold on first base last Sunday in the Abalone Baseball League. In the second game of the afternoon they clubbed their way to a 9 to 7 victory over the luckless Eagles. The defeated team staged a rally in the ninth, but were stopped by a double-play.

In the first game Hopper's Chicken Hawks administered a 12 to 1 beating to Col. Yates' Meadow Larks.

Charlie Van Riper and Don Hale were the umpires.

Here's how the teams stand:

	Games	W.	L.	Pct.
Owls	6	5	1	.834
Hawks	6	4	2	.666
Larks	6	4	2	.666
Eagles	6	1	5	.167

They play again tomorrow afternoon.

THE SCIENCE OF THE DANCE

"As all the arts can be reduced to a science, so the dance," says Mrs. Harris, who is conducting a studio of the dance in Carmel, "depends entirely for its physical basis on the knowledge and thereby the intelligent use of the muscles.

"The pupils can only become an independent and creative artist through this certain knowledge: all exercises depend on the various muscles contracted and relaxed. When this basic knowledge is gained, and pupils understand where these muscles are located and how to use them, they are able to invent for themselves new and interesting combinations; providing they have an artistic sense of design and body which lends itself to rhythm."

Mrs. Harris continues, "I find the young girl quite resourceful, and do all I can to stimulate this faculty. When willing to work for this muscular foundation, she can produce many interesting and artistic effects.

"When greater heights are reached through advanced technique, more expert knowledge of the muscles is absolutely necessary to execute the difficult and intricate variations.

Folkine, the greatest living authority on the dance, says, 'Only through the exercises of the Russian Ballet, can one become an expert dancer, as it embodies all that is of practical use to the performer.'"

ELLA YOUNG TO LECTURE

Tomorrow evening the Theatre of the Golden Bough will present, in Ella Young, Irish scholar and poet, a brilliant lecturer and interesting story-teller. Lord Dunsany, so many of whose plays have been produced by local players in the past ten years, says of her platform talks: "Words so vivid must surely let in light to that third eye of man—imagination, fancy, or whatever it is that sleeps inside his forehead."

Ella Young is one of Ireland's real artists. With the magnetic eyes of the seeress, she has the gentleness and subtle charm of the poet and dreamer. As a lecturer she is said to be exceptionally successful, her voice being full of music but nevertheless colored with a firm conviction which captures her audiences. She is so penetrated by her subject that the heroes of the Gaelic legend take form and become living beings to her listeners.

This noted woman, who has earned world-wide distinction in the field of Celtic mythology and folk-lore, has long been a favorite lecturer in the British dominions. The Irish literary groups are unanimous in acclaiming her as peculiarly fitted to give the message of Ireland to the world. Gifted with a picturesque personality and an almost hypnotic power to sway her audiences, she interprets the cycles of Gaelic story-telling as no one else can. It is especially fitting that she should come to the Golden Bough, a "temple of a living art" named after the most ancient of all symbols of human imagination.

Beginning with tomorrow night, service of coffee in the foyer will be resumed. A loan exhibit of antiques and prints in the foyer will be of interest. Miss Young will begin to speak at eight-thirty, after which the doors will be closed.

JIM HUGHES OUT FOR TAX COLLECTOR

James M. Hughes of Salinas has thrown his hat in the ring for the position of Tax Collector of Monterey County, the election to be held this coming November. Hughes will seek the position to be vacated by J. E. Hunter, who has been in office more than 20 years and who has announced his intention of retiring.

Mr. Hughes is a Salinas man connected with the pioneer Hughes family, was born in Salinas and educated in the Salinas schools.

The aspirant for this honor is eminently fitted for the office of Tax Collector, and will fill the position with honor to himself and the county, if elected. He has the backing of his hosts of friends over the county in his quest for the office.—Adv.

To Wives Who Would Help Busy Husbands---

A HAPPY BREAKFAST brightens a husband's whole day. If breakfast is prepared on electrical appliances, husband need not eat in lonely state while friend wife rushes breathlessly between kitchen and dining room. Together they may enjoy a delicious, satisfying meal, all the more interesting for being cooked right on the dining room table.

Rich, fresh, hot coffee, made in a cheerfully bubbling electric percolator is the most delicious coffee to be had. Toast, fresh, evenly brown, from a glowing toaster, is irresistible. Bacon and eggs cooked on an electric grill, or waffles on a waffle iron, may be prepared exactly as each one prefers.

Fortified by such a breakfast, the husband meets his day's work with unconquerable enthusiasm.

Two Nights of Indian Folk Lore

By John Northern Hilliard

Was Carmel the cradle of the drama. Did this ancient art have its geographical beginnings in what is now Carmel's Great White Way—Within a restricted area bounded on the east by the Forest Theater and on the west by the Theatre of the Golden Bough and the Arts and Crafts. Was it in this idyllic spot, first favored of the gods and destined, millions of ages later, to be transmogrified into a cvilization 100 per cent rotarian, realtorish and pseudo-artistic, that the seeds of dramatic art were first planted? Was it here by an ultramarine sea, in an age when dinosaurs frisked and frivoled among the tropical growth, that the first "little art colony" in the world had its fling among the progenitors of our oaks and pines? Was it here that some Palaeolithic ancestor of Perry Newberry or Herbert Heron staged the first Forest Play? Was it here that some wandering ancestor of George Ball or Edward Kuster belascoed the first "Bill of Divorcement" or "Dulcy"?

Was it here, where Carmel no longer dreams but sells picture post-cards and articles of questionable vertu to the tourist within its gates, that the wandering animal, Man, first lifted his shaggy eyes to beauty? Was it here while yet the Neanderthaler beast-man was tracing rude pictographic effigies of sabre-toothed tigers and tusky aurochs on the dripping walls of his European caves, that the aboriginal cognoscenti of Carmel were enacting the earliest dramas of the world? Was it here, while yet the architects of the Mesopotamian region and the Nile Valley were experimenting wth the first rude shelters of sun-dried mud and Sumerian and Babylonians were heaping up graceless rocky pyramids to the glory of their gods, that in the primitive Carmel forests man was ceasing to be wholly concerned with the problem of food and shelter and was loosing himself on the first great adventure of art? Was it here, thousands of ages before the Latn peoples were dancing and posturing obscenely before the shrine of Dionysus and developing what the historians are pleased in their infinite wisdom to denominate as the first authentic drama, that the stone-age Carmelites were ekeing the first rude dances out with gestures of dramatic import, with speech and chant, with rythmic movement and instrumental sound? Was it here, in short, when civilization was in its inconnabula stage, that the world had its first show?

These questions, sir or madame, are not so widely improbable as may seem at first blush. At any rate, you may rely upon getting an intelligible and theoretically authoritative answer to them if you go to the Arts and Crafts Hall, on Casanova Street, next Friday and Saturday nights, April 2 and 3. On these evenings my very good friend, Matthew M. Murphy, will tell you some things you probably never heard of before about the oldest drama in the world. That is to say, the oldest drama on record. This is the drama devised countless generations ago by the Hopi Indians and which has been enacted for thousands of years, and is still being enacted in secret in one of the wildest oases of the Arizona desert. In secret, because the missionaries, after the meddlesome complex of their kind, are trying to put a stop to what they call "pagan, obscene rites." And the Government, purblind as usual and abetting the missionaries, has officially decreed that these Indian dramas, a strange mixture of yaudeville, dancing and religious ceremonial, must cease. Therefore, the Hopis are obliged to put on this show—the oldest show in the history of the world—in secret.

No white man has ever seen this drama of the Hopis in its entirely. Few white men have ever seen even a part of it. Dr. J. W. Fewkes, a Government ethnologist, saw a part of it one night in a Hopi kiva at Walpi; but being a scientist, with his mind made up in advance as to what it was all about, he had to guess its significance. And about nine out of ten of his guesses were all wrong. So what he had to say about the Drama of the Hopis didn't amount to much.

But there is one white man who does know the signficance of the Hopi drama. That man is Matthew M. Murphy, for some two decades a Government official and educator among the Hopi and Navajo Indians. Now, this man Murphy doesn't pretend to be a scientist. Praise be! He lays no claims to being an ethnologist. Praise be, again! But he does know the Hopis, and where Fewkes and other white scientists who have tried to fathom this Hopi drama business have had to make guesses as to its significance, Murphy has got his information at first hand. That is to say, from the Indians themselves. And he is going to tell us about it on the evenings mentioned. He is going to tell us something about the Hopi Indians that the ethnologists don't know. He is going to give us some inside information about that Hopi drama, which, in spite of what Fewkes and the others say, s really more historical than religious; and he is going to tell us how and why that drama had its beginnings and why it is not at all unlikely that the Hopis, in the course of their tribal peregrinations might very reasonably have settled at one time, in the favored spot that is now marked on the map as "Carmel." And as it was the Hopi custom, even during their wanderings, to give these dramas in order to keep a record of significant events, it is not altogether wildly improbable that somewhere in the vicinity of our own Forest Theater they once gave, ages and ages agone, these very plays that they are now giving in secret on the Arizona desert. Anyway, it is a provocative theory, and whether you agree or disagree Matthew M. Murphy will give you something to think about. Asd he will do more. He will tell you about an ancient civilization that is rapidly disappearing. He will tell you about a tribe of ancient story-tellers whose ranks are diminishing every year. He will tell you of ancient myths and legends, of folk-tales that will soon be lost to the world because the old men who know them are passing, while the young members of a dying tribe refuse to learn the old sagas of their people when there are ten-cent magazines to read and movies to be seen in every desert town.

As I have said, this man Murphy didn't go questing as a scientist in his make-up. His wide blue eyes are too dreamy. He has too much of the Celt in him. Like the people he has lived among for so many years he has vision, imagination, and that touch of mysticism that you will find in all peoples who live close to the earth. And so he did not go into Hopi land to check up facts and compare one legend with another. He lived among them as one of themselves and he heard their stories, their myths and traditions in their own kivas and by their own desert fires. And the things he heard and saw—things that no other white man has heard and seen—he will tell us something about on the evenings of April 2 and 3.

But Matthew Murphy will not be the only entertainer on these evenings. Dr. Derrick Norman Lehmer, professor of mathematics in the Uuiversity of California, whose scientific achievements are supplemented by his valuable studies of American Indian music and his phonographic records of tribal songs, will sing a group of Hopi and Navajo songs, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Helen Lehmer, and by Austin Armer with flute obligato. Dr. Lehmer made these first-hand phonographic records for the anthropology department of the University of California at Oraibi and in the little known Blue Canyon of Arizona. From these records, twenty-seven in all, he will select his material for the song groups he will present at the arts and Crafts Hall. One phonographic record made at Oraibi is worthy of special mention. It is a Buffalo Song. The performers —I am quoting now from an article on Professor Lehmer in the April number of "Sunset"—were four young members of the tribe. Dr. Lehmer made two records of the Buffalo Song, three days apart. The records proved identical, even to pitch, though the song is long and intricate and the Indians have no pitch pipe, tuning fork or other mechanical device to enable them to obtain constant pitch. Furthermore, through all the intricate windings of the song, sung in unison by four men, the most critical can detect but one voice. It is a striking example, Dr. Lehmer says, of the musicianship of these desert dwellers.

Dr. Lehmer will give a group of nine songs each evening. The programs for each evening will be entirely different.

In addition to Dr. Lehmer's Indian songs and Matthew Murphy's talk on the dramas of the Hopis, Mrs. Laura Adams Armer will exhibit her allegorical paintings of the Hopi and Navajo myths and traditions. These paintings were exhibited in the Ainslee Galleries of New York City during the winter and were enthusiastically acclaimed by the leading art critics of the East. As I have already written at length in The Pine Cone of Mrs. Armer's work, I can only add now my own private opinion of the worth of these pictures. I wouldn't miss them if I had to trudge all day on foot under a hot sun across country to see these canvases. She is an artist. Her desert pictures are a memorable contribution to American art.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

THE PLUMED SERPENT

A Novel of Mexico

In his new book, D. H. Lawrence has given us not only a revealing picture of the Mexican scene, but a new conception of the people themselves. He does the rather dangerous thing of stating a problem and suggesting a cure. But because he applies his curative principle to the roots of the trouble, his book has a deep significance.

Realizing that all great changes of any enduring nature come from the religious life of a people, he brings the old gods back to Mexico, after their long sleep of renewal. These are their own gods—of the soil of the country and of the blood of the people.

The Story

His heroine is Kate—an admirable woman of Irish descent, who goes to visit Mexico. She is unconsciously seeking release from the sense of futility with which she has become saturated in the civilized world. She is at first repelled by the crudities of Mexico, by the hopelessness of conditions and the strange inertia of the Mexican people. She is tempted to return when suddenly her attention is caught by a paragraph in a newspaper and she begins to sense something beneath the surface. She follows her impulse and goes to Sayula, where she finds Don Ramon and Don Cipriano in charge of a new religious movement. Gradually the beauty of the thing these men are trying to do becomes clear to her, but she is too cynical to give herself completely to it. She sees the old worn-out gods given back by fire to the elements and the living flesh-and-blood gods take their place.

Quetzalcoatl

So Quetzalcoatl comes back to Mexico in the form of his prophet, Don Ramon, and Huitzilopochtli in the form of Don Cipriano. This gives D. H. Lawrence a rare opportunity to bring his rich poetic sense to bear on a situation already full of wonder and romance.

The hymns of Quetzalcoatl are some of the finest that have been written. The Morning star is the symbol of the thing we all ask of life yet never receive. It hangs between the night and the day. It is the eternal meeting place of the two opposites—the everlasting NOW which eludes us all. It is between the going and the coming and it cannot be possessed.

In one of the most beautiful of the poems we find the following: There is no giving and no taking. When the fingers that give touch the fingers that receive the Morning star shines at once from the contact and the jasamine gleams between the hands. And thus there is neither giving nor taking nor hand that proffers nor hand that receives, but the Star between them is all and the dark hand and the light hand are invisible on each side. The jasamine takes the giving and the receiving into her cup and the scent of the oneness is fragrant on the air."

While there is no question of the clear heights of imagery which D. H. Lawrence has evoked nor any question of his passionate insight into mysteries which are cosmic in scope, it is perhaps stretching the limits of the novel somewhat to hang so much of religion, philosophy, psychology and poetry on the slender thread of a story. A writer whose inner life is so rich and intense and whose interests cover the whole range of human emotions, reaching ever beyond, can hardly conform to limits of any kind.

The Philosophy

D. H. Lawrence has always maintained that there can be no sharp division of human life into separate forces, but that all must function in cooperation. He feels that civilization is running to seed intellectually; that this age of the over-estimation of the intellect is taking its toll in the gradual loss of other faculties.

To. D. H. Lawrence "The mental-spiritual life of white people suddenly flourishes like a great weed let loose in virgin soil. A great death comes—and after that, the living result will be a new germ, a new conception of human life, that will arise from the fusion of the old blood-and-bertebrate consciousness with the white man's present mental-spiritual consciousness. The sinking of both beings into a new being."—D. C. H., Woodside Library.

Navy Taffeta Quilts Its Collar, Cuff and Hem in Soft Blue

© BUTTERICK 6744

If there is anything newer than quilted stitching on taffeta, it is the higher waistline of a basque frock.

IN EVENING colors taffeta has never been missing from the dress circle of the young girl's wardrobe. To some extent it has also been used for her bouffant afternoon frocks. But in black, navy and large cross-bar plaids it is one of the smartest fabrics of the Spring. The plain taffetas have it on the plaids for the moment, for they can be cut on circular lines and trimmed with quilting. At the scalloped hem the quilted stitching is done over a facing of outing flannel covered with the silk. The tie collar and cuffs take the quilted stitching without an interlining.

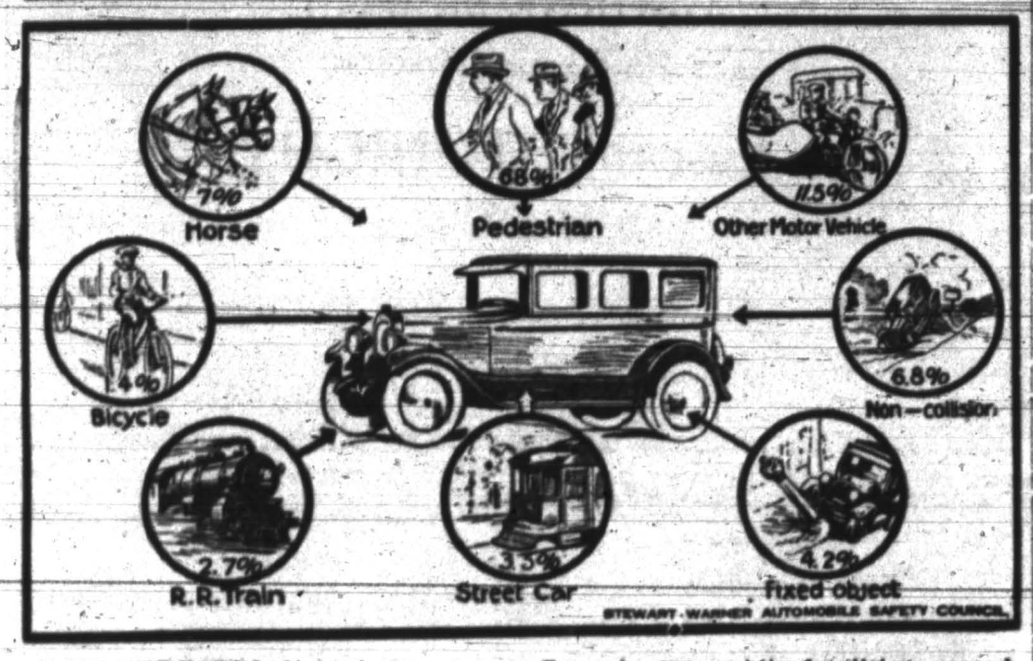
Pedestrian Greatest Victim of Automobile Accidents



THE PEDESTRIAN is the greatest sufferer in automobile fatalities, according to records analyzed by the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents. No complete record is available for the United States as a whole, but a report based on 3,023 auto fatalities occurring in the first seven months of 1925, covering a population of thirty-one million, is significant. Two thousand of these 3,023 fatalities have been classified according to type. Sixty-eight per cent of the victims were pedestrians; 11.5 occurred with another motor vehicle; 7 per cent with horse vehicles, 4.2 with fixed objects such as lamp posts, 3.5 per cent with street cars, 2.7 with railway trains and 1.4 per cent with bicycles. The remaining 6.8 per cent involved no collision. The small proportion involving railway trains is encouraging and doubtless due to the gradual abolition of unguarded grade crossings. The menace to the pedestrian, however, is alarming, and calls for greater care on his part in crossing streets and on the drivers for more careful driving.

THE WORLD IS GROWING SMALLER—AND SAFER

DURING the recent terrific storms on the Atlantic four ships almost simultaneously reported themselves in peril.

"Fifty years ago," says the Paris (France) Times, "not only would they have been unable to call for help, but they would have stood strong chances of going down with all hands. Even in the steamer lanes, a sinking craft blown off her course or just out of the range of visibility of passing ships would have stood small chance of rescue. However, when the faint three dots, three dashes and three dots of the distress signal were picked up by some watchful radio operator, the word was passed and the air was cleared for reception of the unfortunate ship's position and the organization of relief.

"The signals of the powerful navy stations crashed through the atmosphere, demanding right of way and silencing broadcasting. The music and entertainment going out from scores of American stations was stopped for the longest period since the popularization of radio. Millions of listeners-in on two continents were informed that ships were in distress and that they would have to forego their evenings entertainment."

ELIZABETH FAIRLEY IS CARMEL VISITOR

Among recent visitors in Carmel was Miss Elizabeth Fairley, a woman of rare personality, and whose life has been filed with adventures at home and abroad.

BOYS' CLUB HAS INTERESTING MEETING

The Boys' Club had a variation from the usual routine, on Wednesday evening. Mr. Vander Roest was the guest of the evening and led the Club in singing the old, familiar songs. Every boy seemed to have found his voice, and sang with a will. The singing was interspersed with two Mark Twain stories told by Mr. Vander Roest.

After refreshments, the Club adjourned, and before leaving the Club "yell" was given in fine style.

Next week is is proposed to combine a beach supper and an April Fool party.

Facts About the Telephone

In the city of New York there are nearly 50,000 telephone public pay stations.

Five per cent of all the telephones in the world are located in Greater New York.

Alexander Graham Bell was 29 years old when he received his patent on the telephone.

More than a billion conductor feet of wire in cable is being added to Detroit's telephone plant.

An average of approximately sixty-seven million telephone conversations take place in the United States daily.

The city of New Haven in proportion to population has more than twice as many telephones as there are in Paris, France.

Connecticut has approximately 8,000 telephone pay stations. New Haven leads with 1,611, followed by Bridgeport, Hartford and Waterbury in the order named.

The First Message

"MR. WATSON, come here; I want you!" exclaimed Alexander Graham Bell on March 10, 1876, during an afternoon of experimentation, and over a wire connecting two rooms, the young assistant heard the words, — the first spoken sentence to be so transmitted.

Fifty years have passed. Today there are 17,000,000 telephones in the United States, giving voice to human need, as Bell's crude transmitter did then. Fire breaks out in the night; law-breakers invade a home; sickness strikes at the family circle. "Come here, I want you," is the summons, and the telephone speeds it on the way. Business of importance demands the decision of one who is on the far side of the continent. "Come here, I want you," is the summons again, and as if by magic, a personality is projected through space, questions are asked, answers given, problems solved—by telephone.

Every telephone call is an echo of the first message. For whether it is the physical presence or the listening ear that is desired, the impulse that lifts the telephone receiver is, "I want you."

Health Regained on Recommendation of Her Father

Mrs. Milford Adams, of Mayking, Ky., Restored to Health, After Taking Dr. Thatcher's Liver and Blood Syrup

"I want to tell you what your medicine has done for me. I was in a run-down condition, with pains in my head and back. Some days I could sit up all day, and other days I would have to stay in bed. For a while I had a doctor. After the doctor came I thought I was getting better then I began to get worse. My back ached; I lost my appetite. I got so weak I wasn't able to do my housework, so I sent for mother and father, and they came and stayed with us. They had me try different kinds of medicine, but I got no relief; got weaker and lost weight until I looked like a shadow. Father had heard of Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup and he said I could try it, so he and my husband went and got some, and I began taking it.

"After I had taken one bottle, I began to get an appetite and felt so much better, I didn't think I needed any more medicine, but father said I must take more and I took one more bottle and by that time I was well and gaining weight. I am glad to say that I can recommend Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup to be a wonderful medicine for weak and rundown people."
